

What do I do on a CBP?

People from Youth Justice will help you.

You need to meet with Youth Justice a few times.

A youth worker may help you for up to 32 hours a week. Sometimes more.

Like, you may need to do 3 hours a day.

They will help you to stop doing offences.

They will help you do things that you will find useful in life.

Youth Justice can help you

Go to TAFE

Go to school

Apprenticeships, traineeships or work skills

Go to cultural programs

Doing sports and other fun activities

See people to keep you healthy

Learning everyday skills

Talking with your family.

I do not want to do a CBP. What happens?

To stay out of detention, you need to do the CBP.

If you breach your bail, you may go into the youth detention centre until your next court date.

Who do I report to in YJ?

1 day after court gives you a CBP, you must see your YJ worker.

Bail and Bail with Conditions Order (Conditional Bail Program) (Easy English),
ver. 1.0, April 2021

Bail and Bail with conditions (Conditional Bail Program)

What is bail?

When you go to court for an alleged offence, the judge may say:

- you can leave after court
- you must come back to court when they tell you to.

This is called getting bail. You will be on a Bail Order.

This does not mean your court matter is finished.

Your bail order may have conditions. You said 'yes' to doing the conditions.

This means, you may need to do other things, like,

A curfew

You must stay at home when the judge or police tell you to. Usually, curfew is at night time from dark until morning.

Go to your local police station when they tell you to.

Do a conditional bail program (CBP).

No contact with some people.

Stay out of trouble

Do not do any offences when you are on bail. You will make more trouble for yourself.

The court will punish you. They may

- stop your bail

- make you stay in detention until you go to court

- find you guilty of another offence and give you another punishment.

Conditional bail programs (CBP)

A CBP is a program that helps you do your bail conditions.

You must do the conditions in this program or you might have to go back to court.

If you do not do the conditions, you may have to go into a youth detention centre.

The court may give a CBP if:

- You did not get watch house bail
- At your first time in court, you did not get bail

- You have not turned up to court the last times you were meant to
- You have breached the order you have now. This means, you did not do what the order said.
- The court thinks you may go to custody while Youth Justice write their report.

Applying for bail

Your lawyer will make a bail application for you. They may ask Youth Justice for a CBP.

They will talk to you and your family/carers when they make your CBP.

You can tell Youth Justice what you need to help you do your CBP.

Youth Justice will send your CBP to court and to your lawyer.
